

COURTESY LISTING

Kunekune pigs originated from New Zealand. They foraged for their food in the New Zealand forests. They almost went extinct until people domesticated them and started breeding them. They are Not pot belly pigs. Kunekune pigs are very loving social-able animals. They have short snouts and don't root. Great for small pieces of land. They do not test fences. They love ear scratches and belly rubs. Make great outdoor pets. Full size is about 300lbs. Much smaller than normal large breed pigs. At full size, they eat 1lb of food twice a day, that equals out to about 1 1/2 bags of food a month per a kunekune. They love pastures, grass hay and alfalfa. Great for orchard clean up as well.

We have 8 boys and 8 girls for re-homing. They all have their own personalities and love attention. They're great with other animals ranging from sheep, goats and chickens to cats and dogs. Kunekunes love to be social. They're great for munching on pastures or grass, they keep it nibbled down. If interested in coming to meet them and say hi,
