

COURTESY LISTING

I have a spayed three year old (guesstimate from our vet) fawn female Cane Corso I am looking to rehome.

She is a wonderful dog and very typical for this breed. I don't have any proof she is pure bred since I adopted her from a shelter but all our vets/trainers have said she seems like a true corso not a mix.

She has been through basic obedience training and is crate trained.

Her personality is fun, and sweet. She likes to play and wrestle but can also cuddle up on the couch. She is good with other dogs but would probably be best in a home with no other females, typical of this breed. I've never seen her be aggressive with other female dogs I just know Cane Corsos can have issues with same sex.

She would do best in a home with children older than 5, this is why we are rehoming as we have a 1 year old who she is jealous or and frustrated by.

Health wise she had double knee surgery in May and recovered perfectly. The vet said she has mild hip dysplasia but now that her knees are fixed she should be able to live out her life with ease.

Maybe eventually being on joint/pain medication in old age.

My hope is this reaches the perfect person who has been looking for a very special dog to be a part of their lives. She is truly one of a kind.
